

Seeking A Spirit

Long ago, there lived a young Kootenai boy whose name was Lassaw.

One day Lassaw left home and went to the top of a mountain. Lassaw wanted to seek a spirit. While Lassaw stayed on the mountain, he could not have any food or water.

After two days and nights Lassaw cut off the tip of his finger. He tore his shirt and used it to make a bandage.

Lassaw prayed. He told the Great Spirit his finger hurt very much. Lassaw said, "Help me. Give me something so I can become a great medicine man."

Lassaw's finger was bleeding. His bandage was soaked. Because his finger hurt very much, he pressed his hand to his side.

Suddenly, Lassaw saw a buffalo! The buffalo was drinking water. Lassaw knew there was no water nearby. The buffalo continued to drink and when it was finished, it looked at Lassaw.

The buffalo spoke to Lassaw in the Kootenai language. It told Lassaw, "I know you are hurt. I came to help you. Whatever you ask for, I will give you."

The buffalo disappeared. Lassaw had seen the spirit of the buffalo. He knew the buffalo's spirit would always help him.

Lassaw became a great buffalo hunter. He lived a long and a happy life.
