

Nosy Coyote

Wolf and Coyote went hunting. Everyday they would camp at a nice spring. Wolf would say to the camp, "I would like for you to be set up at another spring with good water."

Jim

Each time, their camp would be set up before they got there. Coyote could not figure it out. He wondered who was always setting these camps up.

Later, he told his brother Wolf, "Why don't you go along the other side of the water and I'll follow this trail." He wanted to see who was always putting up and taking down the camp each time.

He went and hid behind some bushes to watch. Soon a pretty Indian girl came along and started to take the camp down and pack it up.

Coyote ran as fast as he could toward the girl but she disappeared. Coyote looked for the girl but no girl could be found.

He tried to say in a loud voice to the camp, "Can you go set up by that nice cool spring?" He ran over to that certain spring but there wasn't any camp set up.

He went back to the old camp and it was still set up. Not a thing was taken down.

Coyote had spoiled everything by being nosy.
